The UC Davis School of Education and the Graduate Group in Education presents

Emerging Scholars Panel:

Scholarship in the Shifting Sociopolitical Context of Education

A special panel showcasing critical, diverse disciplinary perspectives in education from exceptional pre-tenure scholars from across the nation

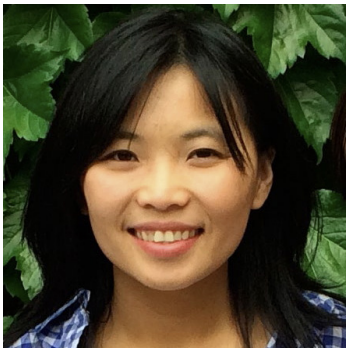
Timothy San Pedro, PhD

Assistant Professor,

The Ohio State University

Dr. San Pedro's scholarship focuses on the intricate link between motivation, engagement, and identity construction to curricula and pedagogical practices that re-center content and conversations upon Indigenous histories, knowledges, and literacies.

Rican Vue, PhD



Assistant Professor,

Oregon State University

Dr. Vue's research focuses on the role of race and its intersections with ethnicity, class and gender in the social, political, symbolic, and structural dynamics of U.S. education with an emphasis on equity and inclusion in higher education. This includes examining how race/racial ideology are remade and resisted in education policy and practice and how these processes shape opportunity.

Mike Metz, PhD

Assistant Professor,

University of Missouri

Dr. Metz's research examines culturally sustaining pedagogies for English classrooms, with a focus on the teaching of Critical Language Awareness. Through this research, he explores English teachers' knowledge and beliefs about English language variation, and students' responses to learning about language, identity, and social power.

TUESDAY
May 1

5:30 p.m.
Presentation Room
UCD Welcome Center
No Fee to Attend
No Registration Required

education.ucdavis.edu/emerging-scholars18

UC DAVIS SCHOOL OF EDUCATION